

SCIC: Assignment 2

Question 1: What are your core values and beliefs?

Answer: My core values are integrity, fostering honesty, and transparency in all interactions. Continuous learning is paramount, ensuring I glean insights from every experience for personal and professional growth. Respect is non-negotiable, treating everyone with dignity regardless of background. Finally, I am committed to excellence, maintaining high standards in every task. These values collectively guide my actions and decisions, shaping a principled approach to both personal and professional aspects of career.

Question 2: What are your goals and aspirations?

Answer: My goals and aspirations are I want to be a great coder. Firstly, I want to elaborate how a person can think logically in his practical life. And then I want to experience the real life analogies into coding. This is a thing that I am thinking right now.

Question 3: What are the first steps you will take to build your personal brand?

Answer: The first step I would take to build my personal brand is teaching. I always believe in a technique of learning called "Feynman Technique" where you teach others of what you've just learned. That's why, I have planned to open a YouTube channel, not for those views and subscribes, rather than I will teach people about what I've learned recently in order to emphasize my learning ability.

Question 4: How does personal branding differ from self-promotion, and why is this distinction important?

Answer: Personal branding is the art of authentically crafting a multifaceted identity that goes beyond skills, incorporating values and personality for a holistic image. It's about creating a lasting narrative that reflects genuine qualities. In contrast, self-promotion tends to focus on specific achievements, potentially lacking the depth associated with a well-rounded personal brand. The distinction is crucial – personal branding is a nuanced, long-term approach, fostering genuine connections. It ensures a sustained and authentic presence, while self-promotion might risk coming across as transactional, emphasizing immediate accomplishments over enduring qualities.

Question 5: What are you most proud of?

Answer: The thing I am mostly proud of myself, I am always 100% honest with me. I hate it to being dishonest at any tiny situation in my life.
